CASE STUDY:

Sussex Community NHS Trust

"Using Canopus allowed the project team to recycle the old redundant telephony equipment which resulted in a credit. Canopus dealt with the request in a professional, flexible and thorough manner which made the whole process very easy."

Recycling through remarketing of telephone equipment

Sussex NHS Community NHS Foundation Trust engaged directly with Canopus Solutions when it chose to standardise its internal phone systems. The trust is focussed on delivering a greener NHS through its "care without carbon" approach. It is committed to recycling 100% of its waste as part of this approach. This vision fits perfectly with Canopus's goal to re-use rather than recycle all IT equipment.

UK Waste Legislation (England & Wales) tells us that where waste cannot be prevented, its re-use has to be the next consideration. Recycling should only be considered when equipment cannot be re-used.

Canopus arranged for collection of equipment in batches so as to minimise the impact on the environment through transportation. Each batch was booked in to our asset management system and every item had its configurations defaulted. In addition to this all items were cleaned, tested, and boxed so as they could be remarketed.

Through arranging efficient collections and remarketing the equipment the net result of the project was that Canopus were able to return cash to Sussex NHS Community NHS Foundation trust, not only helping them with their environmental objectives, but also helping with bring the project in under budget.
